Zoya Voskoboinikov

Zoya Voskoboinikov has been an inspiring math teacher for the past 22 years. As she leaves Lick-Wilmerding this year, the yearbook would like to dedicate the 2014-2015 edition to her. Mrs. V has helped bring out the inner mathematician and thinker in all of her students. Mrs. V has expanded the minds of Lick Wilmerding students and we hope that wherever life takes her next, she will keep on challenging and stimulating people to be their best. Thank you for being such a wonderful educator!

"Without compromise, she sets the highest standards for her students. She has complete faith that her students can meet those high standards, she inspires them to make the commitment to do so, and she supports them every step of the way. She has always been open to new methods and strategies, and has never stopped growing as a teacher, constantly striving to do things better. For all the years that Mrs. V. has been here, the math dept. has been inspired by her passion and commitment to challenging her students and enabling them to learn the most that they can."

(Steve Simon)

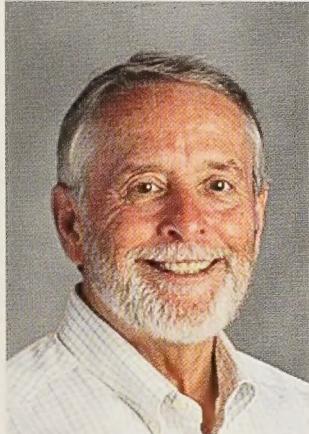

"Beyond being such a caring teacher, Ms. V also managed to always make me laugh and smile. I soon associated this positivity with calculus and began to actually enjoy going to class and learning."

(Stephanie Chung '13)

"It has been a privilege to have you as a friend and colleague for the past 20+ years. I have learned so much from you and been inspired by your dedication and commitment to your students. You challenge students to explore and to be excited about mathematics in so many ways—building models in calculus, creating animations on demos, exploring fractals, designing models of conic sections, and so much more. Your enthusiasm and dedication to teaching is truly amazing. Thank you for all of your help and advice. I will miss seeing you sitting across from me in the math office, having chats over coffee, and getting updates on your grandchildren. I'll think of you often ... as I picture you thoroughly enjoying retirement. I wish you all the best as you move on to new adventures...may retirement be filled with all that you desire and more!"

(Beverly Boitano)

Richard England

As Chief Financial Officer of Lick-Wilmerding, Rick England wasn't the kind of staff member students would see in the classroom every day. However, his work behind the scenes was just as important to keep Lick running smoothly. Mr. England was in charge of planning out Lick's finances and record-keeping. He creates the budget so that the students can get as much out of the academics, athletics, clubs, and extracurriculars as they can in their short time here. Mr. England, after 21 years, will be leaving Lick and the yearbook staff would like to dedicate the 2014-2015 edition to him in gratitude of all that he's done for the Lick community.

"Rick has been dedicated to helping all families manage the financial challenges of sending a student to Lick. His commitment to fairness and equity showed through in all of his work with Lick families: in calculating tuitions for Flex students, in helping families who suffer financial setbacks, and in his hours spent helping parents navigate the system for submitting their financial information. He leaves big shoes to fill."

(Steve Simon)

Letter from the Head

Dear Lick-Wilmerding Students:

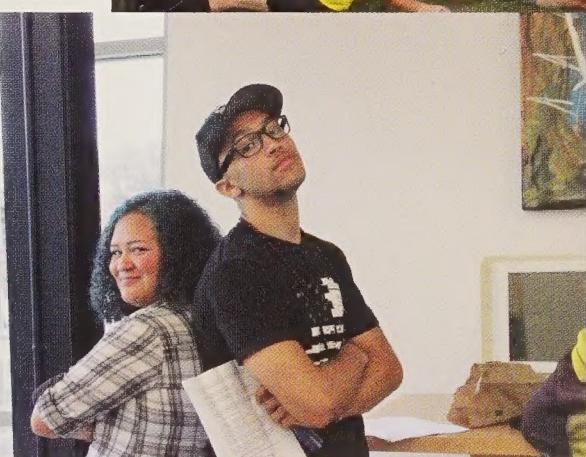

Congratulations on completing your year of studies, growth, and learning. This edition of the yearbook is particularly meaningful to me as I joined the school at the same time as the Class of 2015. It has been a wonderful four years! As you look through this collection of memories that speak to the culture of the school and your many accomplishments, think too how these moments will resonate in the years to come. My hope is that when you look through your yearbook when you are older, you remember the friendships you made, the teachers who cared for you, and the entire community that weaves together to form this incredible school.

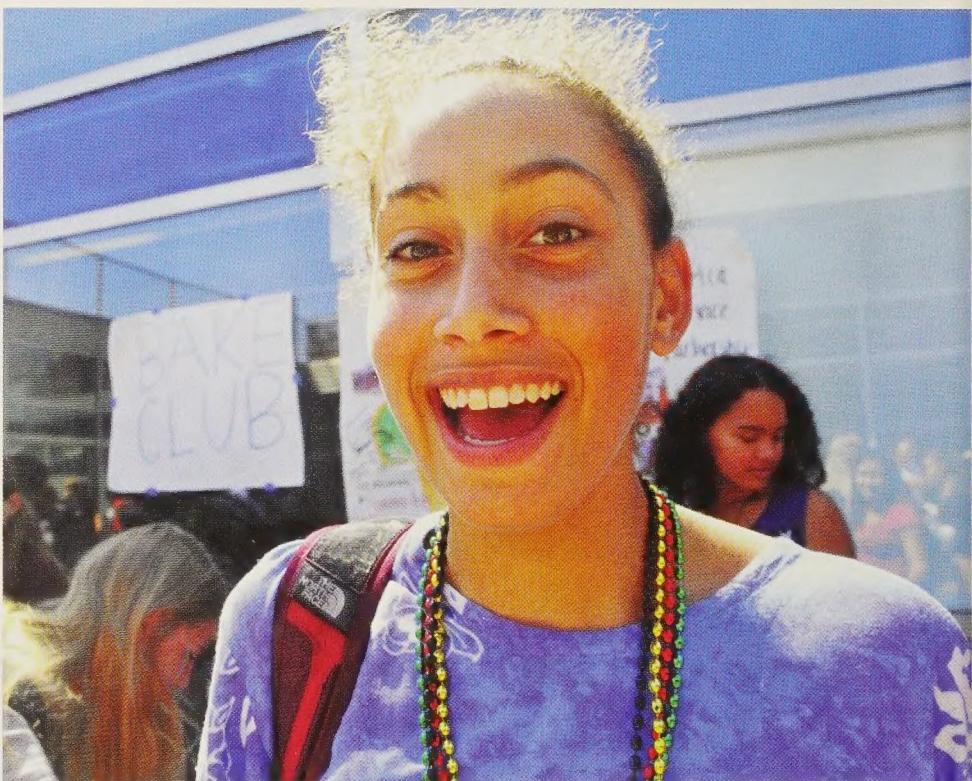

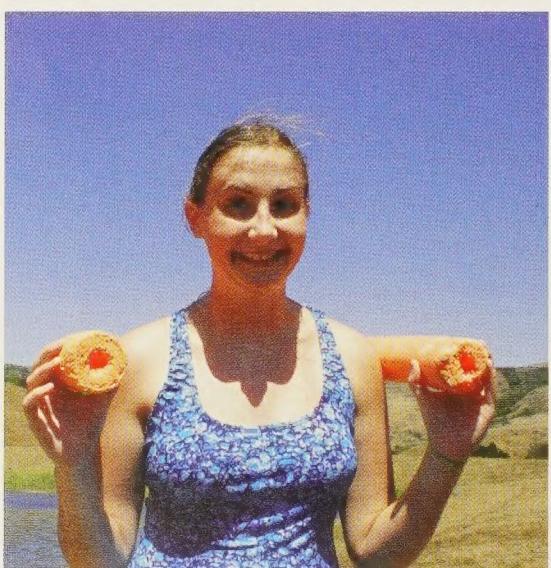

Additionally, please join me in thanking the yearbook editors and Mr. King for all of their hard work to produce this edition The Tiger. I wish you each a peaceful summer and I look forward to seeing returning students in the fall. Seniors, you are now alums. Keep in touch and please share your continuing journeys with us.

All my best,

Eric Temple
Head of School

STUDENT LIFE

Audrey Kalman

Audrey Kalman, a freshmen, plays second base and shortstop for Lick Wilmerding's Varsity Baseball team. She has played for many club teams at Stanford, Santa Clara, and The University of San Francisco. She has also played for California Travel, based in San Jose. For ten years she has played on teams where she's been the only girl, and she always works as hard as she can to succeed. Why? She loves baseball. She likes its pace, taking longer per game than other sports. She really admires the mental game too, how you really have to think during games. Like most underclass players, Audrey is a redshirt of sorts, but looks forward to increased playing time throughout her years at Lick. Her hopes are high for another successful season, with several returning players and great team comradery.

Leo Zaroff

Leo Zaroff, a freshman at Lick-Wilmerding, is a nationally renowned fencer and has worked very hard to succeed in this extremely competitive sport. He started in 2008 and continues today at a very high level. He fences with the San Francisco Fencers Club. He is A rated and is ranked 1st in the nation for the 14 and under level. In addition, he's ranked 16th for the under seventeen level. One of his favorite parts about fencing is how he has to use a strategy. Additionally, he really loves how he is able to travel frequently to many parts of the globe. Over his career he has traveled to France, Poland, Spain, and Italy. He has also traveled to many states such as Kentucky, Oregon, Virginia, California, and Arizona. One of his favorite tournaments was a North American Cup tournament in Portland. There he took third in under seventeen with a comeback win in his last two important matches.

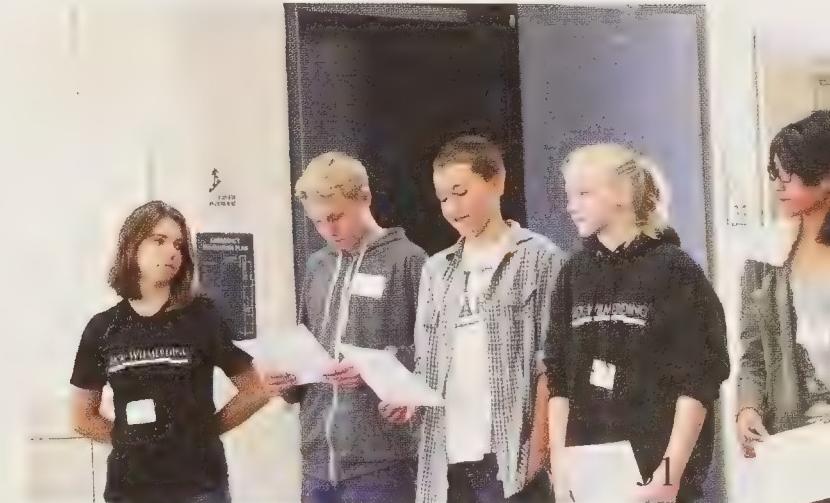

For me, BlendEd was a great way to tap into the collective experiences of different students throughout the Bay Area. Every student in the class lived in a different neighborhood. They each brought a unique perspective to our discussions about pollution and environmental racism in the Race, Place, and Toxics class.

(Royale Privitte '15)

BlendEd

This year, Lick-Wilmerding decided to expand their methods of teaching and became involved with the Bay Area BlendEd Consortium, which combines the best practices for online learning between five different Bay Area independent schools. The curriculum happens both face-to-face and online, which better prepares students for the evolving methods of teaching and communication in the future. BlendEd hopes to mix collaborative, creative, and innovative thinking in their courses. The classes are taught by teachers from the schools within the Consortium and are just as, if not more, rigorous and challenging as classes happening in the classroom. BlendEd is a method of progressive learning that hopes to serve its students well for college and future jobs. Lick's community is excited and grateful for this new way of teaching.

Student Diversity

The Student Diversity Leadership Conference (SDLC) is a three day event where students discuss societal identifiers, prevalent current events, and share experiences. SDLC attendees learn cross-cultural communication skills and effective strategies for social justice. The students brought back these skills and experiences to help design and lead workshops for Walk with Purpose held in April each year.

"We laughed, we shared, we listened, we cried, and then we cried some more. Never have I been more grateful for the candidness of others than at this conference. I learned so much about myself and the experiences of others that cannot be put into words. I've learned that empathy is at the heart of acceptance and understanding those that are different from you. I will treasure the friends I made, the discomfort, the honesty and the enlightenment. Thank you Lick-Wilmerding, for sending us on this life changing journey. Remember "love itself is a revolutionary act"

-Rodney Glasgow"

[Laina Phoutz '15]

Leadership Conference

"SDLC allowed me to catalogue my life experiences and opened my eyes to a world larger than my immediate community. In short, it helped me get a bit closer to understanding who I am.

(Toby Richtind '16)

"It is something that you can't really explain or grasp unless you've been there. It is an amazing experience. You don't think that it will impact you the way it does. It changes the way you think about everyday life. You may not get to connect with everyone because it is such a large group but you feel a connection between the identifiers even though we are all different. At its root SDLC is a great catalyst for dialogue, getting people to talk about issues in our society."

(Sydni Green '16)

White Privilege Conference

The White Privilege Conference is a three day long conference to discuss issues of white privilege and the advantages this privilege provides in society, and ways to fight for racial justice. This year the conference was held in Louisville, Kentucky and five students and three teachers from Lick-Wilmerding attended.

At The White Privilege Conference, I learned from activists of all ages about their experiences fighting for equity and justice. One workshop that stood out was led by members of "Lost Voices," an organization that has been on the front lines of the protests in Ferguson since Michael Brown was shot. They have slept in tents, been tear-gassed and arrested but have continued to march and chant. In the workshop, we worked with them to figure out ways to bring the Black Lives Matter campaign back to our communities. This workshop is one example of the way WPC is not only an opportunity to learn about the ways that issues of race are relevant but also a chance to learn how to take action.

(Emma Greenberg-Bell '15)

The White Privilege Conference opened me up to the injustices in my surrounding environment. I now understand that racism is not only represented by white hoods and police shootings of black people, but also manifests itself in the subtle things. In fact, I learned that white privilege is present in nearly all aspects of life even in a place as liberal as San Francisco.

(George Dicke '17)

Going to the White Privilege Conference taught me about the impact of white privilege in our daily lives. I learned that we should be aware of and embrace our privilege, using it to help give voice to others.

(Sophia Yin '18)

The experience was intense and rewarding with many workshops, keynote speakers, film screenings and caucuses. I hope to bring back what I learned to school in order to discuss and tackle issues of racial inequality within my own community.

(Natalie Gable '15)

Public Purpose Program

Lick-Wilmerding has always strived for a better way to be part of and serve the greater community in the Bay Area. The new Public Purpose Program, designed by The Center, will do just that. This new community service initiative will mean more time volunteering around the Bay than Jellis Block. It also creates different programs for different grade levels. Freshman will continue to participate in Jellis Block, while sophomores will fulfill a forty hour service requirement. This can include anything from volunteering at Glide Memorial Church to helping set up the Dia de los Muertos altar in the foyer. The juniors and seniors will have an option of taking academic courses, internships, or independent studies that revolve around community service. Classes like Race, Class, and Gender, and Private Skills With a Public Purpose will include elements of volunteering in order to give a more educational perspective on service. There is also the Mystery Track that will be revealed soon for the juniors and seniors to take. The Public Purpose Program hopes to fulfill the four C's: continuous, cumulative, creative, and collaborative. It will also serve as a place for community partnership and reflection. Each student will create their own community service plan during their four years at Lick, which will give everyone a creative licence to get involved in varied efforts, from mural-painting to coaching soccer.

FALL ATHLETICS

The 2014 fall sports program at Lick-Wilmerding was a season for success. Boys cross country won the League title for the third year in a row; girls cross country won the League title for the second year in a row; and the JV boys cross country won the title for the sixth year in a row. Soccer also went far, as the boys varsity team ranked sixteenth in California, though they lost in the NCS semi-finals to University High School. Overall, however, they had a great season. Girls varsity tennis won BCL championships and made it to NCS where junior Catherine Peabody made it as far as the semi-finals in individuals. Girls varsity volleyball made it to the BCL semi-finals and to NCS, where freshman Jessica Cusi won MVP as a freshman. Just in the first couple of months at school, sports teams managed to represent their school in multiple statewide tournaments and prove the prowess of Lick-Wilmerding.

Girls Varsity Tennis

Led by six senior captains and returning coach Greg Hom, the Girls Varsity Tennis team had a triumphant fall 2014 season. As a team, they placed first in the BCL West League Championships and made it to the semi finals in the North Coast Section, the best any Lick-Wilmerding female tennis team has ever done. Throughout the season, their teamwork and unity allowed the Girls Varsity Tennis team to finish the season undefeated in their league. “One thing I really tried to work on was somehow finding a way to turn this individual sport into a team sport. [I wanted to] be the glue to unify our coach and everyone on the team,” captain Julia Pollak ('15) said.

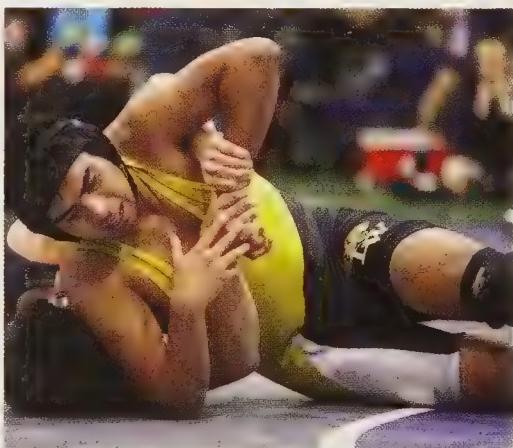

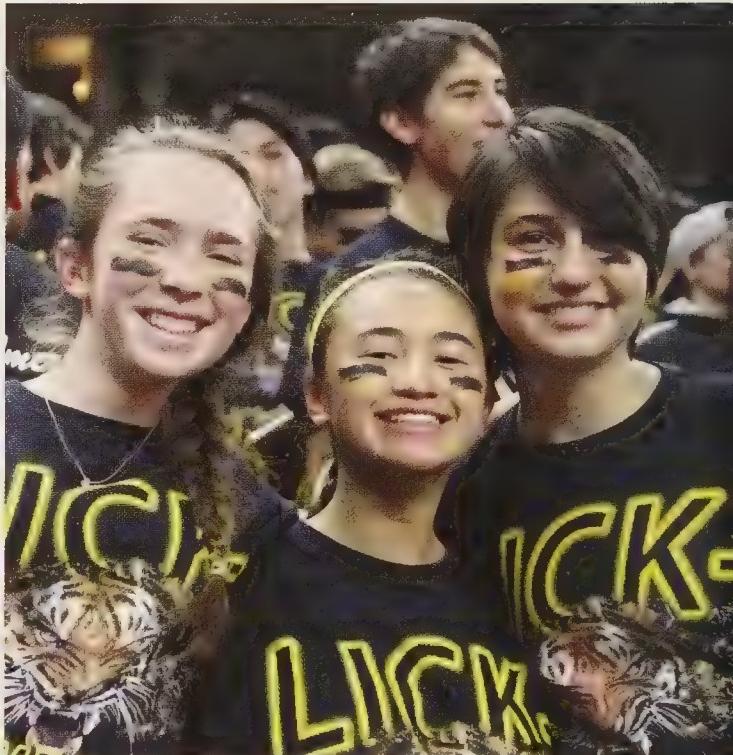

They accomplished their goals of conquering during games and working together like one fierce family. The captains also recounted happy moments during the season, like the underclassmen giving all the seniors gifts, eating Shanghai dumplings together, and cheering each other on during practices and games. The Girls Varsity Tennis team truly embodied the Lick proverb “Champions find a way” during their fall 2014 season.

WINTER ATHLETICS

Even though Lick's winter sports are lacking in size, the basketball and wrestling teams accomplished a great deal. Girls varsity basketball won the BCL championships for the second year in a row and made it to the second round of NCS. JV girls basketball won every single League game during the season. At BCL, senior Ivan Barrales placed second, senior Nathan Wertheimer placed first, and sophomore Cal Crompton placed first in their respective weight classes for wrestling. These three teams showed off their tenacity and skill both on the court and on the mat.

SPRING ATHLETICS

The final season for Lick sports produced, as fall and winter did, champions. The baseball team welcomed its first ever female player, freshman Audrey Kalman. Boys varsity tennis started off well, beating Cardinal Newman High School 7-0, and the badminton team won the first three matches of the year. As always, the track team produced numerous wins and accomplishments during its season. In boys track, ninth grader Erik Stein broke the freshman 1-mile record. The girls track team became seven-time defending League champions; sophomore Jill Reilly won first place in both the 1600 and 3200 meter dash; junior Eva Laxo also won first place in 100 and 300 meter hurdles; senior Kelley Omran won first in shot put and second in discus; and junior Shevann Steuben placed first in discus and second in shot put. Lick-Wilmerding teams proved themselves as adept athletes with all these individual and group achievements.

TECHNICAL ARTS

VISUAL ARTS

PERFORMING ARTS

The Waves

The Waves is Lick-Wilmerding's entirely student-run and co-ed a cappella group. The octet is made up of a diverse array of students from all grades who are selected from an open audition process at the beginning of each school year. The Waves adapt and perform arrangements of pop songs and barbershop songs at various venues both on and off campus. They have performed at the California Academy of Sciences, a Google sponsored hackathon, and numerous talent shows and galas across the Bay Area. Over the past year, the ensemble has drawn inspiration from a variety of artists including Pentatonix, Fleet Foxes, and John Lennon.

With the end of the 2014-2015 school year comes the culmination of an era for five senior members: Claire Fry, Emily Dwyer, Nick Frangenberg, Zach Hollander, and resident beat boxer Julian Holmes. These five performers have all shared an incredible past few years of collaboration and new experiences. Although they will dearly miss being a part of the Waves, the senior leaders couldn't be more excited to see the positive changes that next year's returning members will bring to the group.

Muses

In their second year on campus, Lick-Wilmerding's all-female, girl-power a cappella group, Muses, have been busy performing at Community Meetings, the Freshman Picnic, and the Golden Tigers luncheon. The women of the Muses continue to strengthen their voices, as well as their friendship, to the tunes of powerful female musicians and icons such as Adele, Lorde, Alicia Keys, Beyonce, La Roux, and the Wailin' Jennys. In the spring of 2015, they are gearing up to perform for the second time at LWOW's annual GirlTalk event in April, where they will be performing a pop song by Kimbra and a folk tune calling for freedom and equality. Check them out at LW Muses on SoundCloud and YouTube!

Andrew Kleindolph

This year, the beloved electronics teacher Andrew Kleindolph decided to turn his sabbatical into a learning experience. "I just knew that during my sabbatical I wanted to learn something and really focus on learning," Mr. Kleindolph says. "Because electronics and programming are changing so fast and there are so many new tools, it felt like I'd been so busy with teaching that I hadn't had time to learn new tools." He also knew that he wanted to get out of San Francisco for a new experience. First, he took a couple of architecture classes at California College for the Arts that focused on 3D modeling. Mr. Kleindolph was looking for what do next when he discovered the School for Poetic Computation in New York City. "There were a couple of artists I was interested in and I saw them speak about the school," he says. "It just looked super interesting." So he and his wife rented their house in San Francisco and moved to Brooklyn with their cats. "For me it was great," Mr. Kleindolph reminisces. "It was out of San Francisco, I was exploring a new, super stimulating, urban environment, and then there was the ten week long program that was exploring how to use technology and programming creatively." He enrolled in five classes at the School that he found motivating, even without the grade.

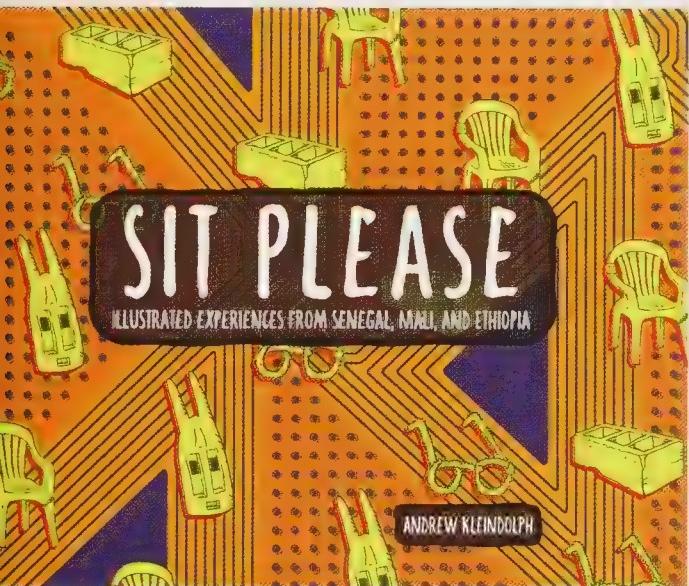

One of the classes centered around animation using code and interactivity. Using an application called openFrameworks, Mr. Kleindolph learned how to build applications without having to write them from scratch. The class was also instructed by the co-creator of open Frameworks, artist and computer programmer Zach Lieberman. Another course, taught by software engineer and designer Ramsey Nasser, was called Radical Computer Science and it explored all the “Weird languages that nobody uses,” as Mr. Kleindolph described.

“It was basically talking about why programming looks the way it does and what is the history of it.” He also had to create a few projects along with the course. Next, Mr. Kleindolph took a class about hardware that looked at how computers work on the most basic level. The class discussed how one can get information from one place to another and was taught by artist and writer Taeyoon Choi. His fourth course was about theory and explored the questions: “How is the internet decentralizing power? How will the internet affect us in the long term?

What is the role of surveillance in the internet?” Mr. Kleindolph also learned how science fiction was influenced by technology. “It was a super good program,” he says. “I learned a ton, met a ton of interesting artists, saw a ton of great work, and came back super inspired.”

Now that he’s back at Lick, Mr. Kleindolph wants to incorporate what he’s learned from the School of Poetic Computation into his electronics courses. “I’ve been rewriting my classes based off of stuff I learned,” he says. “One of my classes is basically all new this year.”

Overall, Mr. Kleindolph had a stimulating, exciting, and scholarly sabbatical. He also praised the School for its pedagogical model because it only costs about 15% of what a semester in college costs, even though it’s like going to grad school for ten weeks. “In a world where education is getting increasingly expensive,” Mr. Kleindolph explains, “I felt like this was a super accessible, interesting way to think about it.” He summarized his entire trip with “good times.”

"IF I COULD CHOOSE TO BE AN ANIMAL, THAT ANIMAL WOULD BE A PIGEON"

"There is nothing like returning to a place that remains unchanged to find the ways in which you yourself have altered." – Nelson Mandela

This summarizes what it feels like returning to Lick now. I came to Lick freshman year as the girl who got too fired up on Facebook, who refused to play sports, who never considered History one of her favorite subjects, who never stayed late doing activities after school. Now I look back and am amazed by how much has changed. I still get too fired up on Facebook, but you have taught me to listen more, and acknowledge that I think I am right more than I am. You have accepted me unconditionally on the Varsity Badminton team. I am now writing a historical fiction novel. And I look back fondly on our countless food-filled layout nights for The Paper Tiger (InDesign problems and Oxford comma disputes included). Thank you for pushing me to grow and for giving me a safe, hyphen-friendly space to learn in. – Amelia Roskin-Frazee '15

THINGS ANTONIA SAYS:

- I don't know anything about humans
- India's not in Asia
- I will bite with all my force of bite
- if there's a tree, it's wilderness!
- are they from real France or fake France?
- They're in the newspaper with a horse and a trophy and they go bowling all the time
- You are a grandwithering piece of broccoli juice
- Do apples make eggs?
- It wasn't exactly stolen because it used to be free.
- I forgot my letters. What, you never forget those?
- I hate languages. Why doesn't everyone just speak human?
- I always wave to people below when I'm on airplanes so that they don't think I'm being rude.
- Today, I poed on a beetle.
- I wish I was naturally sunscreened.
- I'll huff and I'll puff and I'll blow my own house down!
- That's how you spell tea! T-A-E!
- I thought that that flying plastic bag over there was a pigeon doing cartwheels.
- My buns fell down while I was time warping.
- I'm finally out of debt! I can buy furniture!
- Is squidward an octopus?
- You know that white guy who ran for president?
- The old one?
- One time I won a staring contest with an iguana.
- I'm scared of dwarves but you can't run without a bra.
- A dream is a fish your heart makes
- A butterfly is just a frenchfry with a face in it
- Mr. Krabs' daughter is a whale...let me tell you how that happens: interracial marriage, and then an affair
- Just a spoon full of cottage cheese makes the medicine go down
- Sometimes when I have free time I just wanna go to target.

Dear Lick-Wilmerding Community,

Covering the pages of this yearbook are photos and memories from this past 2014 - 2015 school year. We have filled each page of the book with colorful collages that represent the student body that makes the Lick-Wilmerding community so special.

We would like to thank all of the students, faculty and staff who helped make this yearbook possible. Special thanks to Sarah Chess ('15) and Sophie Schneider ('15) for designing and creating the cover of the yearbook. Thank you to Bruce Tickner ('18) and Danya Rubenstein-Markiewicz ('15) for helping to write the articles within the yearbook. Finally, a special thanks to our yearbook advisor, Oscar King, for helping us through the process of creating this book!

- Sophie Schneider ('15) and Shevann Steuben ('16)
